Senator Sumner said this was a very good reason why this bill should not be referred to that committee. It had twice been before that committee and there was no necessity of again sending it there. The senate had acted on the bill as a committee of the whole, and he could see nothing in the motion to refer lut a mode of opposition by imposing time, impediment and delay. The bill stood number one on the calendar, and should have been acted upon the first day of the session. His desire—he might say, darling desire of his soul-was to have this great question closed now, so that it would never intrude again in this chamber; so that never again in our legislation would there be such a word as white or black, but legislation should be only for citizens. Senator Frelinghuysen thought he could answer the gentleman [Senator mner], that if the bill were referred to the judiciary committee it would be reported back perfected, within two the electoral college. Senator Morton said that the committee on priviloges and election had the subject under consideration and would report soon. The resolution was referred to the committee on privileges Senator Edmunds said, that on Thurs-. day he would ask the senate to take up the bankrupt bill.

The bill to authorize the organization of national banks without circulation, was then taken up. Senator Morton effered as an additional section his bill authorizing national banks that have reduced their capital stock, to withdraw depositing lawful money of the United States in proportion provided by law. All sums heretofore appropriated for buildings, purchase of sites, etc., which are made unavoidable by this act, are covered into the treasury, and the secretary is directed. to suspend work on any building already commenced, whenever, in his judgment such suspension can be made consistently with the public interests.

The committee on judiciary had before themto-day the question of the Alabama distribution, and listened to arguments by Dudley Field and Wm. M. Evarts. The former argued that six hundred and thirty-two thousand dollars of the Alabama indemnity fund should be paid to the defunct insurance company which had paid that amount to insurers under war risks, and the latter argued in favor of including in the distribution of the ward the rights of insurers who have paid their losses. Outstanding legal-tenders amount to three hundred and eighty-one million nine hundred and ten theusand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars.
